

Shape your process safety culture and increase your business performance
Adopt the Standard

Process Safety Management training solutions tailored to your needs Underpinned by National Standards

From vision to execution, Cogent Skills Services provides proven, integrated and comprehensive bespoke Process Safety Management training solutions for the entire workforce; based on industry developed National Standards.

For organisations seeking to establish an exemplar process safety culture, Cogent Skills Services provides an end-to-end learning and development solution that drives measurable improvements in business performance.

The solution we design will be as unique as your business, as well as being designed to meet the national standards approved by the PSMPCB*.

Customised experience

We have extensive experience of developing bespoke process safety management courses with measurable results. Benefits of our approach have included; a reduction in the number of Lost Time Incidents, an increase in near miss reporting, improved safety cultures, increased productivity and greater understanding of process safety among senior leaders.

The competitive advantages of bespoke solutions

Customised process safety training solutions return more for your investment, as every aspect of the course is relevant to your organisation's skills and knowledge needs.

Our customised solutions offer relevant, tangible scenarios, simulations and case studies, and we can incorporate a variety of delivery styles including, web based, blended learning, and classroom-based learning, or a combination.

 Demonstration of competence to regulators

 Classroom, web based or blended learning

 Company branded materials and workbooks

 Customised assessments

 Benchmarked to the Industry standards

Cogent skills

for science industries

The Process Safety Management Competence Programme Board (PSMCPB) - comprising the Health and Safety Executive (HSE), trade organisations and key employer representation, provides guidance and expert advice on the development of national training standards for Process Safety Management which underpin all our customised process safety management solutions.

Our process safety management courses are acknowledged by the HSE within the 'Understanding COMAH: The Performance and Recognition Framework'. Organisations who have invested time and energy into our training will have sufficient knowledge and experience to demonstrate a commitment to improving process safety performance to the Competence Authority.

We are ideally placed as the delivery partner of the PSMPCB* to ensure that any developments will meet the standards of industry and regulatory authorities.

The bespoke Process Safety Leadership course made us recognise the need for a strong process safety culture and how to have effective process safety conversations amongst the company. We will be looking to create a pyramid for effective Process Safety training and we will be having a review of our audit progress. The delivery of the course and the trainer's knowledge of the subject were very good.

- Unilever

As a result of the bespoke Process Safety training we have understood what Process Safety is, how it can be applied throughout the organisation and to always ask questions if anyone is unsure. We will look to coordinate with others on how and when we will roll-out this process safety training to other colleagues. This is the best training we have had in a while and it is the start of a new journey for us.

- Yorkshire Water

The bespoke Process Safety Management Foundations training showed the clear distinction between personal and process safety. It was a very good and illuminating course. It allowed us to understand the risks and the difference between analysis and assessment, and raised awareness of the regulatory requirements such as COMAH. The training identified the need to stay focused and aligned to the training requirements through the company. The trainers were excellent and worked very well together. They were highly knowledgeable and experienced with good presentation and communication skills. Overall it was very good training for us; it provided good grounding in Process Safety elements. Thank you for an informative course!

- Tullow Oil

With customised process safety training returning more for your investment, is it time for you to adopt the standards?

Book a free consultation with one of our process safety experts by phoning us on 01325 740900 or email industry@cogentskills.com